PREFACE

This Check List, like its multigraphed predecessors of 1919 and 1924, has been prepared to meet specific needs of The Newberry Library and its readers. These needs have determined not merely the content, but also the form and arrangement of the entries.

Since the primary interest of the collection is typographical history, the list follows the Proctor-British Museum pattern rather than the Hain sequence by authors. In the main only specialists make use of books of this character; to conform to the standards familiar to such specialists, authors' names are here given in the Latin rather than in vernacular forms. For a similar reason a more complete system of bibliographical citation has been adopted than is strictly necessary to identify each book. The extension of the list to include all incunabula available for public use in the Chicago area will also, it is hoped, facilitate the work of both visiting and resident scholars. Finally, because experience has shown that incunabulists are often more interested in typographical paleography than in a particular edition, it has seemed worth while to record even single specimen leaves. Such material, it will be noted, has been interpolated decimally in the numbering system so as not to exaggerate the total count.

In a certain sense this Check List is an "account rendered" by Dr. Butler, the first Custodian of the John M. Wing Foundation. More than thirteen hundred of the books recorded here have been purchased since 1920 by the Trustees of The Newberry Library from the proceeds of Mr. Wing's bequest. These volumes were all of the first Custodian's personal selection under a policy formulated by him, and adopted by the Trustees as the program of the Foundation soon after its establishment.

The formation in recent times and with limited funds of a collection of this size was rendered possible only by unusual conditions in the European book markets in the period following the World War. To take advantage of this extraordinary condition the Trustees of The Newberry Library resolved to devote for the time a greater part of the Foundation's current income to the acquisition of a representative collection of specimens from the early period of European typography. These specimens were to be typical examples of coeval book-making rather than collectors' rarities. Each proposed acquisition was scrutinized for its significance in the historical picture. A new imprint or a new type specimen was given preference over mere chronological priority and even comparative rarity of edition. At the same time, as the record will show, there was no hesitation to acquire items rendered expensive by their popularity with collectors, provided their historical significance was commensurate with their cost. In the main, books of textual value were also selected wherever possible, but this was always a secondary desideratum. The predominant theme of the collection must always be bibliographical history.

More emphasis was laid upon the acquisition of complete books than was perhaps justifiable. Except for editions whose rarity made the future acquisition of a perfect copy utterly improbable, no imperfect specimen was admitted to the collection. For the few that were accepted photographic facsimiles of the missing leaves are to be acquired as rapidly as possible.

The Check List enumerates not merely the incunabula of The Newberry Library, but, so far as they were ascer-tainable, those belonging to other institutional libraries located in Chicago and its immediate vicinity. The institutions represented and the number of incunabula owned by each are recorded in tabular form on page xx. It should be noted, however, that a few books, which were formerly described as incunabula by bibliographers are retained in this list although they are now dated in the sixteenth century.

In the Chicago collections of fifteenth century imprints, advanced students will find sufficient material to study at first hand many significant phases in the cultural history of European civilization. These volumes serve not merely to indicate the main outlines of the development and spread of printing but they likewise bear witness to the enrichment of the apparatus of scholarship which became possible as soon as books could be produced rapidly and cheaply. It is quite easy to trace here through typical specimens the gradual evolution of title-page, punctuation, diagram, map, illustration, index and the other similar aids to the reader. Moreover the texts themselves are of manifold significance. They are fairly representative of the intellectual interests and enthusiasms of western civilization at a critical moment in its history. Through them one may obtain a direct contact with the science, the religion, the philosophy, the law, the rhetoric, and the vernacular languages of Europe on the eve of the Reformation and the age of geographical discovery.

Although this check list is intended primarily to meet the needs of incunabulists it may also, perhaps, have a certain wider significance for the administrators of public reference libraries generally. Here is demonstrated, in a particular field, the extent to which neighboring institutions may acquire unnecessary and expensive duplicates so long as each library pursues its way independently and there is no coordination in book selection nor immediate exchange of information concerning important acquisitions. Yet it should be noted that the number of duplications shown here is undoubtedly less than normal: The Newberry Library obtained lists of the incunabula in the two largest collections of the city—the John Crerar and the University of Chicago libraries—before it undertook extensive buying. Thus the acquisition of second copies of books already available was avoided in at least this one instance. Approximately two-thirds of the ninety-three duplications occurred before this policy was adopted.

GEORGE B. UTLEY
Librarian

INTRODUCTION

This list follows the model established by Robert Proctor, that is, the arrangement is chronological. The various countries are taken up in the order in which printing was introduced within their borders, according to the political divisions of Proctor's time, and under each country the cities are arranged on the same principle. The presses of each city appear in the order of their establishment and the books of each press according to the date of their publication, so far as this is ascertainable. Books which cannot be dated are entered last under the press that issued them.

Each entry in the list shows: (1) Date. (2) Author. (3) A brief title. (4) Bibliographical references. (5) Shelf number.

For the spelling of authors' names, titles, and the like, Proctor's usage is taken as a standard. In general his datings are also accepted, though in a few instances later authorities have been followed. The Newberry shelf numbers, also, are taken from Proctor, with the interpolation of decimals to bring into the scheme books which do not appear in his Index. Shelf numbers are also shown for the incunabula of the John Crerar Library and those at the University of Chicago. For the holdings of the other libraries only an abbreviation of the institutional name is given.

Of the incunabula recorded in this Check List 1613 are to be found in The Newberry Library. These books belong to four separate groups according to the circumstances and purpose of their acquisition.

In 1890, shortly after its establishment, the Library purchased 2691 volumes from the private collection of Henry Probasco of Cincinnati. Among these were 112 incunabula, primarily of collectors' interest because of their age, rarity, or beauty. Mr. Probasco had secured some of the finest of his books at the sale of Eugène Yeminez more than twenty years before. Of the Yeminez books which thus reached The Newberry Library, many had been rebound ornately by the foremost French binders of the period. To any one familiar with such work this means that the volumes have suffered in the process: every leaf is ironed smooth, some of them have been washed, margins have been cropped, and the volumes resewed so tightly that accurate collation is difficult; in some instances the absence of certain leaves is difficult to detect; and with the destruction of the old bindings, indications of previous ownership have been lost. In spite of all this the Probasco group includes some of the most desirable specimens in the whole Chicago collection, e.g. the Hypnerotomachia, the 1481 Dante, the Nebrissensis, and the Renner Bible on vellum.

The next group of incunabula to be acquired by the Library were purchased from the J. A. P. Madden collection later in 1890. M. Madden held an original theory of the importance of Ulrich Zel, which he expounded in his Lettres d'un bibliographe, 6 parts, Paris 1868–86. After his death his collection was sold at auction. By a lucky chance The Newberry Library had secured a copy of the sale catalogue and for some reason, now unknown, placed nominal bids. The auction was so poorly attended that no less than 19 volumes containing 28 incunabula came to Chicago. This accounts for the somewhat disproportionate wealth of early Cologne items in the Newberry collection. Incidentally, it may be noted that many of these volumes are in their original bindings.

A third group of incunabula, small in number but of the greatest value, were acquired when the entire private library of Prince Louis-Lucien Bonaparte was purchased in 1901. Prince Bonaparte had gathered his books not as a collector but as a linguist. His purpose was to secure adequate samples of every dialect used in Western Europe. His library of more than eighteen thousand volumes, now in The Newberry Library, is one of the most extensive private collections ever assembled for such a purpose. His incunabula, fourteen in number, included the three Low German Bibles, the Catalan Imitatio, the Cologne Chronicle, and the Latin-Swabian dictionary. This last is in a characteristic binding signed by Johann Rychenbach and is perhaps the only extant specimen of his work which has not been rebacked.

The valuable private collection presented to The Newberry Library by Mr. Edward E. Ayer in 1911 included eighteen incunabula of special importance for Americanists. Mr. Ayer's main interest in books was through the history of the American Indian. Only incidentally he collected material on early navigation and narratives of exploration. His rarer incunabula include the Columbus Letters and six fifteenth century editions of Ptolemy's Geography. These latter form a part of the collection of fifty-three early editions of the book assembled by Henry Stevens and acquired by Mr. Ayer.

Last in the series and by far the largest in number are the incunabula purchased by the Library for the Wing Foundation. In his preface to this volume, Mr. Utley has described the scope of this collection and that part of its program affecting the acquisition of incunabula. I can add little to this beyond my personal thanks to the Trustees and to the Librarian for the liberty of action which they allowed their Custodian. Five pilgrimages through the book markets of Europe in the space of ten years is a professional luxury that does not come to every American librarian.

My incunabula mission was to secure typical material illustrating all possible phases in the development of printing from its invention to the close of the fifteenth century. For this such specimens must be selected as would reveal most clearly the process of their fabrication. My second task was to select, wherever a choice was possible, books which contained those texts that were most significant of the intellectual interests and methods of scholarship current in that period.

For both purposes Proctor was my constant guide. His classification remains the most complete history we have of the whole movement, and his list of the incunabula in the British Museum and the Bodleian Library records a normal accumulation for generations of readers rather than a collection for special interests. In typographical paleography Jenkinson's catalogue of the Woolley Hall incunabula was also invaluable. This collection was, in the main, a selection of characteristic type forms, made by an expert in that field; in many instances George Dunn's own learning was supplemented by that of his friend Robert Proctor.

In the selection of texts no such compact guide-books were available. The factual Latin literature of the later Middle Ages has never been bibliographically summarized. Ebert, Manitius, the Benedictine Histoire littéraire, and even most of the manuals in patristics do not come down to these centuries. Fabricius is the only author who attempts a general treatment of the whole field of literature in which I was interested, and he, as every one who has used him will know, fails to mention a host of important writers. To check my selections I was therefore forced to consult the special treatises and monographs in the history of scholarship, at the nearest library. The long series of anonymous reference librarians who, at one time or another, aided me, a semi-articulate stranger, to find the data that I needed, were not only courteous and patient, but they also gave ample demonstration that their catalog systems, which were so strangely un-American, were, none the less, quite as efficient as our own.

The quest was not merely interesting, at times it was exciting. One adventure at least may be worth recording. In 1926 a second volume of Ulrich Han's Latin Plutarch was obtained in Paris, to go with the lonely first volume which the Library had recklessly purchased thirty-six years before. After the book was brought to Chicago, it was easily identified as the original mate. The evidence of the bindings was unmistakable. The set had evidently been rebound for the Cistercians at Luxeuil shortly before their library was plundered by the French Revolutionists. But most of these adventures turned on the acquisition of a rare specimen or the finding of a bargain, and these are not matters for publication. Perhaps, in years to come some future custodian may have the curiosity to examine the price record. If he does, he is sure to be envious of the conditions which I found in the book market during the post-war inflation. But for his consolation let him remember that there is no record here of my errors of omission. Perhaps there were books which I should have chosen and did not. Yet most of the important areas are now represented by sufficient samples to enable local students of typographical history to handle facsimiles and bibliographical descriptions of unobtainable material with some feeling of competence. I shall, however, always regret my inability to secure a few leaves of the 36-line Bible. This monument of printing remains a puzzle for the historian, so one primary problem is still unrepresented in the collection. Until very recently there were two such lacunae, but while this Check List was in its last stages of preparation the Donatus recorded under entry No. 2 was acquired as a representative specimen of the so-called Costeriana.

To print my name on the title page of this Check List without some acknowledgment of the assistance I have received from many sides would be to misrepresent the character of my labor. In the formation of the Newberry collection I was supported by the sympathetic enthusiasm of certain European booksellers. Among these men, commonly regarded as mere tradesmen, there are not a few who, in the breadth and accuracy of their scholarship, should be counted with the foremost bibliographers of our generation; unfortunately the results of their studies are usually unpublished, or, at the most, appear only as anonymous notes in ephemeral trade catalogues. Several of these scholarly dealers entered heartily into my project for securing typical specimens of fifteenth-century printing. Some of them revealed unconsciously their disdain for the artificialities of the collector's conventional standards. Many of them more than once advised me against books in their own stocks which would not fit into my program so well as other volumes which they knew about and believed I could secure elsewhere. I cannot enumerate all to whom I am indebted for this kind of assistance though I must name a few whose contribution was greatest. Dr. Martini, then of New York, was the first bookman of this type that I met; to him I owe much. My greatest single debt, however, is to Mr. R. A. Peddie into whose kindly hands I fell a few days after my first landing abroad. Then, and at each subsequent meeting, he placed at my disposal his wide knowledge of books and his unerring bibliographical instinct, sharpened by a lifetime devoted to incunabula studies. Others who must also be named are Dr. Leo Baer of Frankfurt, the late Dr. Hiersemann of Leipzig, Mr. Schulte-Strathaus of Munich, Mr. Arthur Spaeth of Zurich, Dr. Aeschlimann and Professor Armanni of Milan, Mr. Orioli of Florence, Mr. Hugh Davies, Mr. Goldschmidt, Dr. Ettinghausen, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Davis, all of London, and Mr. Harper of New York. Professional librarians, also, made a generous contribution. Meetings with Dr. Haebler, Dr. Guppy, Dr. Collijn, Mr. Pollard, Mr. Scholderer, Mr. Seymour De Ricci, and Dr. Zedler, were not only memorable but each of them exerted some influence upon the character of the Newberry collection.

In the preparation of the Check List itself I am equally indebted for the patient assistance of several colleagues. Dr. Lester D. Condit, while a student at the University of Chicago, was employed by The Newberry Library to prepare card entries for its incunabula. To do this he had to turn my records, which follow the tradition of incunabulists, into the forms preferred by American library practice. At the same time he re-collated each volume and verified my references. Inevitably he found much to correct, but his greatest contribution was to check the attribution of each unsigned volume in roman type, by means of the unpublished method of identification which he has devised to supplement Haebler's system. His most spectacular achievement here was his transfer of the Phalaris (No. 1785) from Naples, where I had placed it, to the first press of Spain. Next, Mr. Rudolf Hirsch, of Munich, who spent the summer of his 1931 Wanderjahr as a volunteer member of The Newberry Library staff, worked through the whole record a second time; I used his judgments as deciding votes where Dr. Condit and I had held divergent opinions. Finally, Mr. Ernst F. Detterer, my successor in the custodianship of the Wing Foundation, has edited the manuscript for printers' style, and, with the assistance of Mrs. Woodward, Custodian of the Rare Book Room, has re-inventoried the items, rechecked the Index and Hain Concordance, and renumbered the entries according to a system which he believes will be more convenient than the one I had used. To our secretaries, Mrs. Erler, at the Library, and Miss Marshall, at the University, not only I, but all those who worked with me, feel a great debt of gratitude for their painstaking copying and recopying of a difficult record.
